Technical Overview

This week's momentum was not rewarding for the investors' as heavy selling pressure was observed throughout the week. The fall/ rejection has also been supported by a larger volume. Which could be an indication of the fall now taking over as the index has now been rejected after a short swing. The market's confidence also seems to be troubled by the political instability around the market. The market is expected to bounce back from our previous demand zones. The rise in volume this week, however, indicates the slim chances of that happening any time soon. The market remaining sideways rather than trending could be great for us, as momentum may rise anytime the political environment also clears out.

Daily analysis

On daily graph,

The doji at the end of last week turned out to be a great indication of the selling pressure. The market has been on an uptrend has been halted as the index had a larger selling pressure throughout the week. The potential test of the 2600s seems to be in action as we head towards our support area. above our recent low, should be considered a safer and healthy path for the market.

Here are some of the zones to watch to determine the direction of the market.

Support 2: 2540	Resistance 2: 2780
